Press Release 2023.04.06

Tokenization of real-world assets is opening up fresh opportunities for yield generation in the DeFi space.

We are excited to share with you some insights on the latest developments in the world of decentralized finance (DeFi) that are taking the financial industry by storm. Tokenized real-world assets (RWAs) have emerged as a new frontier in DeFi, bringing new yield opportunities to investors.

Tokenization refers to the process of converting an asset into a digital token that can be traded on a blockchain. In the case of RWAs, it means that assets such as real estate, art, or even a company's shares can be turned into digital tokens that can be traded on a decentralized exchange (DEX). This allows for fractional ownership of assets that were previously illiquid and only available to a limited number of investors.

The advantages of tokenized RWAs are numerous. First and foremost, they offer investors access to new yield opportunities that were previously unavailable. By tokenizing an asset, its value can be split into smaller units that can be sold to investors, who can then earn a share of the asset's income. This income can come from rental income in the case of real estate, or dividends in the case of a company's shares.

In addition to offering new yield opportunities, tokenized RWAs also have the potential to democratize access to investments. By fractionalizing an asset, it becomes more accessible to a wider range of investors, including retail investors who previously would not have been able to invest in such assets due to high barriers to entry.

Tokenized RWAs are also more transparent than traditional investments. All transactions are recorded on a blockchain, which is a public ledger that can be viewed by anyone. This provides investors with a high level of transparency and ensures that all transactions are secure and immutable.

The growth of tokenized RWAs is still in its early stages, but the potential is enormous. As more assets are tokenized, we can expect to see an increase in the number of investors participating in DeFi, and a corresponding increase in liquidity and price discovery.

So how can investors take advantage of this exciting new trend? One option is to invest in a DeFi platform that offers tokenized RWAs. These platforms allow investors to earn a share of the income generated by the underlying assets, while also benefiting from the transparency and security of blockchain technology.

As with any investment, it is important to do your due diligence before investing in tokenized RWAs. This includes researching the underlying assets, the platform that offers the tokens, and the potential risks associated with investing in DeFi.

In conclusion, tokenized real-world assets are an exciting new development in the world of DeFi that offer investors new yield opportunities and democratize access to investments. As more assets are tokenized, we can expect to see an increase in liquidity and price discovery, and a corresponding increase in the number of investors participating in DeFi.
